

What I claim is my invention is a light but durable six by four inch stretchable leather, cloth, rubber, or heavy plastic glove, that can fit around any size right or left hand, with three foot long straps made out of the same material with either fastening buckles, or enclosures at the end of the straps, two which extend from the top of the glove itself, and one, "the third," strap extending from the bottom of the glove, that can enclose around any fishing pole.
